

Angie McMahon's songs were written for live performances. Her captivating presence and soulful, warm vocals transfixes the audience. She writes lyrics that capture life experiences in her own unique way.

Her debut single 'Slow Mover' is a song that etched itself into the back of my mind after first hearing it live. Weeks later it would randomly pop into the forefront of my mind. Maybe it's the way the song slowly builds, or that infectious chorus, or the fried chicken lyric. Probably best if you just hit play.

'Slow Mover' is a compelling introduction to what this young singer-songwriter is capable of.

Angie launches her single at The Workers Club on Thursday November 2nd. Get tickets here.
