

A thick fog blankets the city of Melbourne. The cold snap makes it increasingly harder to get out of bed for work each day.

It's easy to feel unmotivated during the colder months, but in Woody Pitney's case he has been busy putting the final touches on his new single.

'A Little Too Late' marks the first release in some time for Pitney, and we're excited to be sharing the first listen. With a darker, more serious edge, the song builds around dramatic vocals and urgent drums. Recorded with John Castle (Vance Joy, Cub Sport), 'A Little Too Late' showcases another side to the folk/pop world of Woody Pitney.
